The Onlooker

The Chance of The Bourbons

There is mixture and muddledom enough now in the political situation, what with the ragged edges of the straight tickets and the several independent candidates also running. But wait until the big Bull Moose leader comes back next week, and if Pandemonium won't be made an obsolete word, for very meaninglessness, by what happens, then "Soapbox" Barron will still have a look-in on the laurel basket for being "it" with the Ciceronian goods.

That the only George R. (standing for Roosevelt No. 2) will not have a digit in the "punkin" pie may be dismissed as a vain conclusion. Even now some of the stand-pat party men, of the yore before the steam-roller performance in the opera house gave them a tired feeling toward all things political, are fresh-courage taking at thought of return of Carter of Lanai deal fame. "Wait," they are saying in hushed whispers on the corner, "and see what George Carter will have to say on the matter of tickets."

Of one thing all may be sure, if George "does be himself" on the occasion, and that is that drear anticipations of a merely dull slaughter of mudhens on the regular tickets and of belated marathons in the independent class may be abandoned right now. For whoever shall bite the dust in this war of many factions, if the Bull Moose corral discharge its few but fiery fighters into the arena, will have the joy of dying with the glow of red fire in their eyes, the smell of quick-burning deadwood in their nostrils, and in their ears the victorious shouting of the Bourbons, helped to overwhelming success by the short-sightedness of their divided opponents.

The Horrible Example

That the fitness of things may be exemplified by accident as well as design has an illustration up Fort street.

As the Onlooker was hiking toward Uncle Sam's temple of justice the other day — though not in custody — he was warned to keep off the street on the side next the boarding of the new Cooke estate building by a considerably mangled boy. This young watchman had his left hand bandaged and hung in a sling, while his right eye was screened with a pink patch. He explained his warning by saying that something might drop on one from the workmen at the top of the structure. As the Onlooker passed on he wondered if the young watchman was "Exhibit A" of the consequences of walking in the danger zone indicated. This problem kept worrying him over-night and next day he asked the lad if a hammer or something had fallen on him to produce his mangled appearance. He smilingly replied in the negative, informing the inquisitive one that his disarranged physique was due to contact with some mechanism in a waterfront sawmill. All the same, his appearance lent great force to his kindly warning to pedestrians.

DAMIAN COUNCIL Y. M. I. ILLUSTRATED LECTURE

Damian Council 563, Young Men's Institute, gave a stereopticon lecture Wednesday evening at their headquarters in the C. B. U. hall, which marked the opening of its campaign of instruction for the members. A large audience was present and at the close of the meeting the chaplain of the order, Father Valentin, discoursed on his experiences during his travels throughout the United States and Europe. Pictures of different places of interest in America and Europe were thrown on the screen and the various scenes were a revelation to those who have never been away from the Hawaiian Islands.

Nomination of officers for the coming year takes place in November and there are already many aspirants among the candidates for official honors.

SPIEGELMYER TELLS WHY HE IS GOING TO VOTE FOR TAFT

Mein Lieber Adolph:—I wrote to you last week as how dere was more as a liddle fun offer der investigation off der land troubles and most efferly thing else vhat iss being carried on by Secretary Fisher. Golly! Adolph, he can ask more questions as a school teacher. Dere iss lots off difference in der opinions of der farmers vhat in neffer did any farming, as to der size off der piece off land vhat should giff a man a lifting. Some off der fireside farmers think as how ten acres would be big enough for one man to farm. Vell, maybe it iss. Ten feet square iss more as enough for some off 'em. Den again, ten acres iss plenty, for it could be stood up on edge and planted on both sides. Der price der gofferment charges would hold it up.

No, Adolph, I don't think as how I vill effer get married. Idt iss not because as how I don't can find der gal, but—Shssh!—idt vas der public utilities corporations. You don't believe it, eh? I show you. Vhen you get your money for der week's work idt goes in only two sheneral directions. If you iss married idt goes to der liddle wife. If you iss not married idt goes to der utilities corporations, and der corporations are not going to giff a wife a show iff idt can help idt. Idt vashes all off his linen, starches all off his shirts, presses all off his clothes, shines all off his shoes, fixes up his hat like new and a lot off other things, and suggests as how you look in a store vindow vhen you go py and see how nice you look, and at der same time you hear dot utilities corporation vesperring in your ear, shust like dot "shill shmail voice," and idt says: "If you had a wife and some shildren you could haff to shine your own shoes, and let your wife press your clothes and all off der other thing dot ve iss doing for you in a shittle vot no wife could come up mit," and it hisses right in your ear. "Look at der fellows vhat iss veard der things, as vas done up by der vives, and see how dey suffer!" Vell, dot iss enough, Adolph, on dot subject. No wedding bells for Spiegelmyer.

Oh, Adolph, idt iss funny as how you ask me how I vas going to vote. Sure I vas going to vote for Mister Taft, and now, right here, I am going der beoble vere, and don't you forget idt. He iss a man vhat likes peaceableness, and he don't go around trying to kick up a fuss mit everybody, or try to get a lot off people fighting together. If ve vas to get into a row mitt Mexico you would haff to pick Mexico up mit a blotter, but ve don't vant any fight if ve can get outt off idt honorably, and Mister Taft iss der man vhat shiteered der whole business clear and came out mit shust as much honors as iff he had got in and knocked der shuffins outt off der whole caboodle. And dere vas der Cuba rumpus. Did you notice, Adolph, how he handled dot business? But at der same time he peliefs in an army and a navy vhat vas not afraid off anything, and in all off his dealings mit der shmail nations vhat vas vinting to fight he kept a shiff upper lip and came through it all mit colors flying and dere vas not a shot fired.

Every man makes mistakes, but the weather man gets more of his in print.

He made der civil service business nearly twice vhat idt vas before he vent to der office of president. Und dot Panama canal—say, Adolph, Mr. Taft shust got right in and plowed dot thing for further orders!

He has conducted der business for which ve pay him to do in a vay dot ought to make der beoble raise his vages at der end off der week. Mister Taft iss der candidate off der Republican party, der party vhat has always has been, iss now, and promises to be der safest and most progressive dot der country has effer had, and dot iss der reasons why I am going to vote for Mister Taft, vhen der times come pretty soon yet.

Vell, idt iss getting hotter in politics down here efferly day, and vhen you meet a man vhat looks bleasant vhen he shakes hands mitt you, and he don't got something to sell or he don't vas running for office you look at him mit suspiciousness.

Vell, anyhow, Adolph, you bet as net, it is no wonder we get so much how I am glad dot dev can't make automobiles dot can go much faster mitt out getting in der projecting class, and den dere owners can be arrested for discharging viremas on der inside off der city limits.

Your friend,
SPIEGELMYER.
